Turps Offsite Programme...

Being a mentor on the Turps Offsite-programme is all about visiting painters in their own studios - whether that's a fully functioning designated space at home or a reclaimed spare room, a purpose-built prefab in the garden or a walled-off space in a multi occupancy studio complex.

The delight in doing these visits comes from the variety and differences in artists' spaces.

Their studios range from the beautifully neat and tidy where there's a place for everything, to the gloriously chaotic. Often every square inch of space is piled high with source material, photos, sketches, and anything to hand becomes a palette. There's a plethora of stuff and things that a painter will collect and deem useful. In all these variations of the studio, their paintings have been made and thought about, ideas and methods are questioned and answered, paintings have been declared finished or are in the process of being so, or maybe discarded and then, later, re-worked.

So, it's an important occasion when as a result of all this effort and making, the paintings are then removed from their origins and placed in a gallery space alongside others' work. It's here that they're exposed to the outside world for consideration by the gallery visitor. They exist in a new space which allows each work to begin to operate on us, on its own terms.

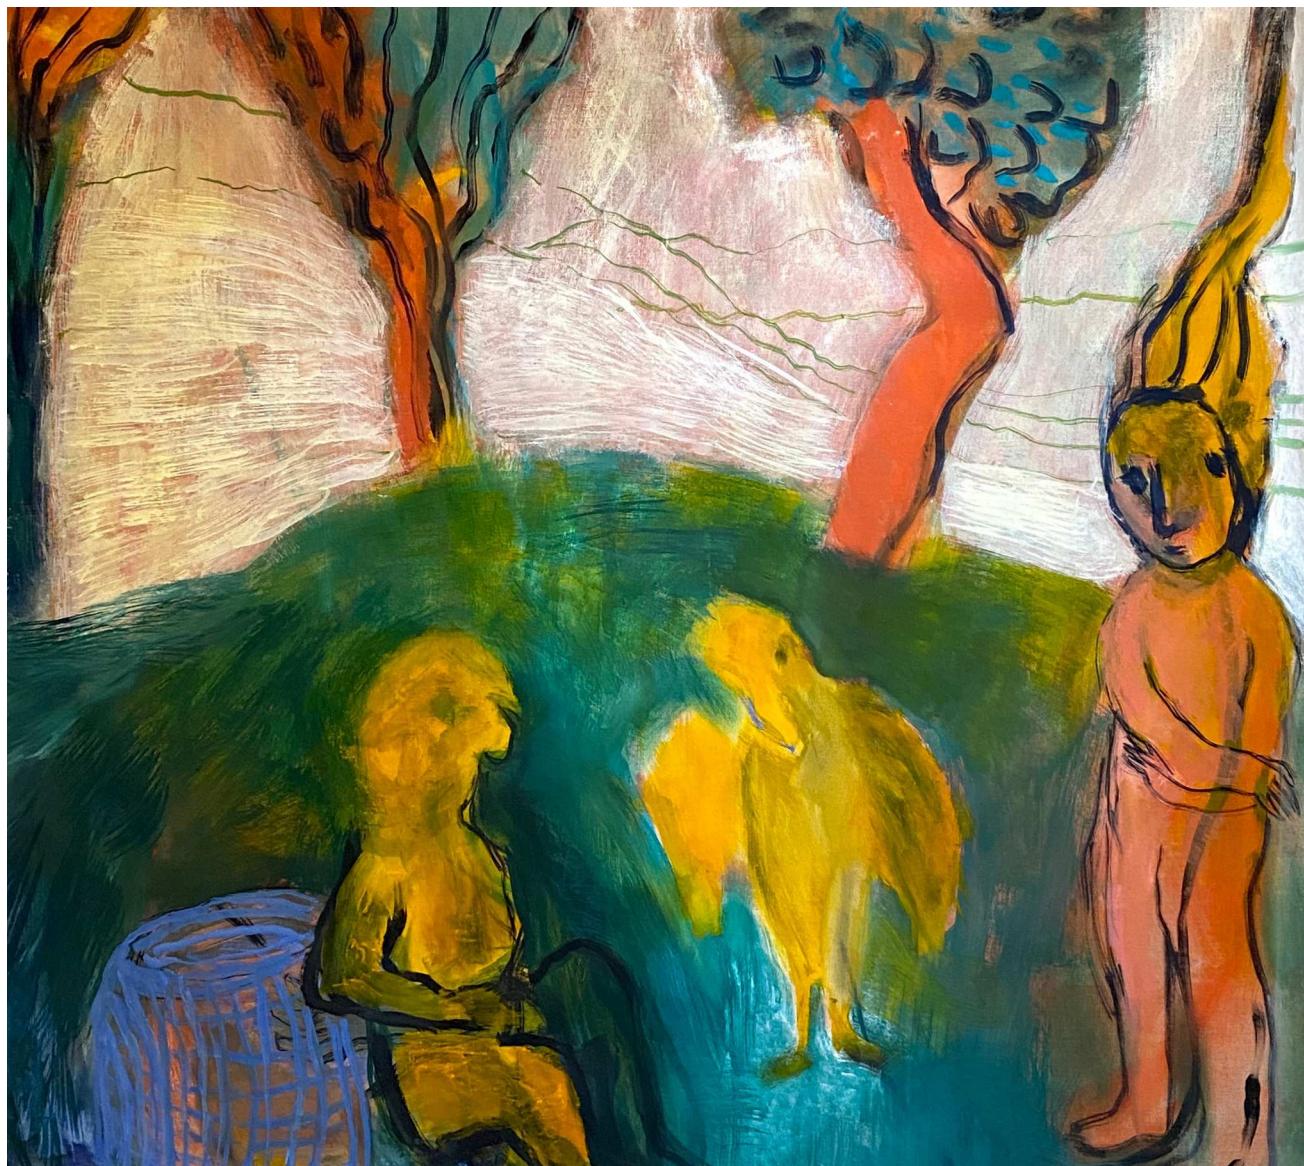

This show brings together the painters who have all completed the Turps Offsite Programme between 2019 – 2021. Coming from a range of histories and backgrounds and through their dedication during a challenging period of lockdowns and zoom meetings, this current group of painters defined the ethos of the Offsite Programme – one of support, independent thinking, and community spirit.

They've all achieved so much during their time with us, creating a firm direction and supportive network to carry them forward into the next stage of their practice.

I'd like to personally congratulate all the painters involved in this show and especially those who have given over extra time to organise this catalogue to celebrate this occasion. I'd also like to thank the mentors of the Offsite Programme for their dedication and hard work: Andrea Medjesi-Jones, Benjamin Senior, Neal Tait, Katrina Blannin, and Joanna Kirk. And lastly, I'd like to thank you the viewer for coming and visiting this show.
